HOPE.

Hope! smiling guardian of my earliest years,
Oft hast thou led me with thy syren song
The thorny paths of life among,
And ne'er forsook me in the vale of tears:
Still painting, with thy fascinating pow'r,
To brighter scenes, and to a happier hour.

When ruthless penury my youth has chill'd,
And one dull cloud envelop'd all my thought,
Life's thousand avenues I should have sought,
Had not thy sweet voice my ear no longer fill'd:
But—bright Enchantress! thou could'st e'er prevail,
And all my woes have vanish'd at thy tale.

Thy magic pow'r, then, lovely Goddess! keep:
And, when I droop with the world's varied ill,
Do thou indulge me with thy transports still—
And still beguile me on—till death's eas sleep.
So shall this breast its portion yet support,
And thy dear presence never cease to court.

B.

The Dirge of Wallace.

BY CAMPBELL.

They lighted a taper at the dead of the night,
And chaunted their holiest hymn;
But her brow and her bosom were damp with affright:
Her eyes was all sleepless and dim!
And the lady of Ellerslie wept for her lord,
While a death-watch beat in her lonely room,
When her curtain had shook of its own accord,
And the raven had flapp'd at her window board,
To tell of her warrior's doom!

Now ring you the death-song, and loudly pray
For the soul of a knight so dear;
And call me a widow this wretched day,
Since the warning of God is here!
For night-mare rides on my strangled sleep;
The bird of my bosom is doom'd to die,
His valorous heart they have wounded deep,
And the blood-tears shall his country weep,
For Wallace of Ellerslie!

Yet knew not his country that ominous hour,
Ere the loud matin bell was rung,
That a trumpet of death on an English tower,
Had the dirge of a champion sung!
When his dungeon-light looked dim and red
On the high-born blood of a martyr slain,
No anthem was sung at his holy death-bed;
No weeping was there when his spirit fled,
And his heart was rent in twain!

Oh! it was not thus, when oaken spear
Was true to that knight forlorn;
And coats of a thousand were scattered like deer,
At the blast of the hunter's horn:
When he strode on the wreck of each well fought field,
With the yellow-hair'd chief of his native land;
For his lance was not shiver'd on helmet nor shield,
And the sword that seem'd fit for archangel to wield,
Was light in his terrible hand!

Yet bleeding and bound, tho' her Wallace might
For his long-lov'd country die,
The bugle ne'er sung to a braver knight
Than Wallace of Ellerslie!
But the day of his glory shall never depart,
His heard unentomb'd shall with glory be balm'd,
From his blood-streaming altar his spirit shall start,
Tho' the raven has fed on his mouldering heart,
A nobler was never embalm'd!

From Blackwood's Edinburgh Magazine.

THE MARBLE HEART.

When Love's first blush came o'er my heart,
'Twas when thy beauty seiz'd it;
Nor hath it let that flush depart,
Although thy coldness freez'd it.

Thou stood'st before my wondering eyes,
A shape of magic lightness,
And, in my midnight dreams, didst rise
Array'd in fairy brightness.

But cold, cold, cold—the marble stone
Not snowier and not colder;
A glory to be gaz'd upon,
That chill'd the charm'd beholder.

Against thy charms 'tis vain to war,
'Tis vain to try resistance,
The kneelers in thy temple are
All kept at holy distance

But know—for bards may speak the truth—
And list the voice of reason,
Though fair the rosebud be of youth,
'Tis only for a season.

The chilling winds of winter haste,
O'er time's rough ocean, hither;
And like the weeds upon the waste,
The fairest rose must wither.

Urban Chevreaux, a French historian, tells us, "When I was young, I remember attending a sermon, preached by a prelate, who was celebrated at court for the greatness of his talent. It was on the fact of Mary Magdalen. The bishop, having enlarged much upon the repentance of Mary, observed, that her tears had opened to her the way to heaven; and that she had travelled by water to a place, where few other persons had gone by land."

Moral and Religious.

TO-MORROW.

To-morrow, that idol deity in which the world have agreed to place their trust, to-morrow that half spun thread on which is hung the weighty concernment of eternity. What is to-morrow? No part of our possession, no part of our inheritance; it is a part in the great chain of duration, but perhaps no part of our present being. Clear and bright, and steady, as it shines to-day, some sudden blast may blow out the lamp of life; and to-morrow may have conveyed us into other company, and settle us into other scenes. Boast not of to-morrow till you have unrolled the book of fate and learnt what to-day shall bring forth. Last night, it is probable, many a gay youth threw himself on the bed whence he shall rise no more, and many a busy head reposed itself upon the pillow, where it shall sleep now and take its rest. How sad and serious are many now, who but last night, were giddy, thoughtless, presumptuous and vain: how terrible has this to-morrow proved to many, who but yesterday said unto themselves that it was yet soon enough to repent. Thou fool, this night thy soul shall be required of thee! was a severe, yet gracious warning. In every breeze that blows there is a flight of human fate; in every breath we drink in the deadly poison; every hour we stand in jeopardy; then every man in his best estate is altogether vanity. In every walk we take death treads upon our steps, he watches us in our retirements, he follows us in our business; he mingles with the angels that stand round our bodies: in that very moment when we are least apprehensive of our fate, then the tyrant springs upon his prey, rejoicing to add to his native horrors the necessary terror of surprise. In the midst of life we are in danger of some fatal blight: in the highest health we may be nearest some mortal malady. What then is life? Is it not a fleeting cloud, an evaporating smoke, an exploding meteor, a painted bubble? Break, the bubble must—in its greatest beauty it will break ere night.

To DIE!—Ah, solemn scene? yet sure nature recoils at the gloomy thought and fain would pass it over. The tyrant may forget the object of his revenge, the parent her smiling offspring and man his God, but death remembers man must die. Our lot remains unchanged—our doom fixed.—Earthly splendour has no exemption from his shafts: youth and beauty must obey his mandates. To-day in health, to-morrow "food for worms." The tender ties of earth cannot prolong our stay: the tear of paternal fondness, conjugal affection, avail not, the tide of life spent, we must depart to worlds unknown. The pillow of disease is the moment of reflection;—we then cast a retrospective eye on time past in improprieties: we bid them not welcome: the intruders fix on our minds, and torture our departing spirits.

View this picture, ye giddy triflers: ye fashionable libertines, cease to mock Omnipotence. In the last dread conflict, friends may wish in vain; nature's struggle's lost: Death is conqueror still—reflect—reform.

SCRAP OF BIOGRAPHY.

C—— was born in New England. His relations were among the most respectable people in that country. At a suitable age he became an apprentice to a mechanical employment in Albany, and faithfully served out his minority. Perhaps it was the watchfulness of his master, rather than any virtue of his disposition, which governed C. in this case—for, free from the restraint of authority, he soon showed that his natural propensities were highly depraved. C. longed to make a figure in the world, and hailed his escape from servitude as the happy period which was to usher him into a new state of existence. In a week afterwards he was at Utica, where his artful manners recommended him into any society he chose. He became a politician, and harangued the multitude on all occasions—he caught a military spirit, and succeeded in raising an independent company, of which he was chosen lieutenant.—Nor was he devoid of the usual gallantries of his sex. After declaiming a few hours in the field of Mars, he would occasionally debouch into the groves of Venus, and spend the remainder of the night in wenching.—He had cunning enough, however, to conceal his foibles, and succeeded in ingratiating himself into the good graces of a respectable tradesman, whom he afterwards ruined This tradesman entrusted him with goods to a large amount, with an understanding that he should open a store on the borders of Lake Ontario. Here C. gave loose to his desires. The receipts of the store amply furnished him with spending money, and nothing was withheld that could contribute to his gratifications. At a fourth of July dinner, he showed his agility by springing on the tables and trampling the dishes and glasses to atoms. This was a hundred dollar frolic, which he promptly cancelled the next day by paying the money. His fame reached the ears of his partner, who speedily dissolved the concern, and gave C. an opportunity of seeking adventures in another quarter. Unable to discharge the claims against him, and being threatened with prosecutions, he assumed the garb of a midshipman, and forged a warrant from the secretary of the navy. Thus, with a dirk at his side and cockade in his hat, he passed by sheriffs with impunity. Returning to Utica he met with the man he had ruined, and spit in his face to show his contempt of him and prove his valour. From here he went to the metropolis of the state, where we lost sight of him.

A year or two afterwards, war having, in the mean time been declared, C. was a volunteer at the battle of Sackett's-Harbour, where he received a wound in the shoulder. His intercourse with the army naturally introduced him to men of the lowest class, with whom he soon became a free companion. After his discharge, he was seen to loiter in tippling shops, instead of flourishing in coffee-houses, and was not scrupulous of demanding a treat from an old acquaintance, and threatening to flog him in case of non-compliance.

Here we again lost sight of him, and continued ignorant of his adventures until we saw him in the metropolis of the union. H was meanly clad, his eyes haggard, his countenance bloated, and he seemed just recovering from a state of deep inebriation. He was also pennyless. His genius, however had not forsaken him—and making a short excursion into the country, he returned in a genteel suit, which he had probably purloined from a fellow lodger at a tavern.

A year or two afterwards, he was in one of our commercial cities, where he presented himself to a charitable mechanics' society, with a false declaration of his being of the same occupation, and of having just been liberated from Dartmoor prison. The members listened with credulous simplicity to the fictitious narrative of his sufferings, and voted him a sum sufficient to defray his expences to Albany, whither he proposed returning to his friends. The next morning he was seen lying on one of the wharves, dead drunk, with no clothing but a pair of ragged trowsers, through the rents of which his ulcers excited the compassion of every bystander. What naturally suggested itself to all was instantly adopted—a cart was procured, in which he was placed, and conveyed to the almshouse. Such was the fate of C.

MORAL.

Though vice may flourish for a season, it must in the end make full retribution.

The Wild Rose of the Valley.

A TALE.

The evening air blew chilling cold: Dorothy threw her apron over her shoulders and went to the wood-house for faggots. Ellen was left alone; her eye fell on the stump of the withered rose tree: "That was Edward's gift," said she, mournfully, "Peace is now restored; he will return; he will think I have neglected it; for alas! it is withered. But, no! Edward must come no more to our cottage." Hearing the returning step of Dorothy, she wiped away the starting tear; for well she knew her good mother would chide. Dorothy entered trembling: "Mercy! my child; come and listen; sure I heard the church bell toll." Ellen turned pale: she listened with breathless expectation; again the heavy bell struck with awful reverberation. "Oh!" cried Ellen, clasping her hands together, "the news has arrived that Edward is killed." Vainly now did Dorothy call upon the name of her child, who lay senseless on the cold earth. Ellen was the lovely, virtuous child of honest parents; but she was tenderly beloved by the son of the wealthy Dr. Hamilton. In the rural sports on the green in front of the mansion house, Edward had often gladly joined, often pressed the fair hand of Ellen with rapture to his lips, and breathed in her ear accents of pure unchangeable love: but parental authority interposed; Edward was ordered to accept the hand of the rich, the haughty Miss Lyndall. His heart proudly revolted; yet to disobey a father, hitherto fond and tender was death. He implored a respite: Dr. Hamilton granted his petition; and the regiment in which Edward served was ordered to the Lakes; yet his departing words breathed fervent, constant affection to his Ellen, and his parting gift was the rose-tree which she now bewailed.—"For heaven's sake! my child," said Dorothy, "be composed. I will step to the gate, and see if any one passes from the mansion house. Dear, now be comforted." Dorothy stepped to the gate. "Bless me! as I live, here comes a soldier down the hill!" The word revived Ellen: she flew to her mother's side. The soldier descended the hill; he seemed to walk feebly, and leaned on the shoulder of a boy. "Sure," thought Ellen, "that is Edward's form;" but as he approached nearer, conjecture changed: his dress was shabby and disordered, his hair uncombed; and a bandage passed across his eyes, marked the sufferings he had endured in the dreadful scenes to which he had been exposed: for Edward it was, and love soon revealed him to the wonder-struck Ellen. In a moment both of his hands were seized by Dorothy and her child; who forgetting, in the first joy at sight of him, the shocking change of his appearance, led him in triumph to the cottage; but enquiry soon succeeded; and while Ellen fixed her eyes upon her withered rose-tree, in anguish, exclaiming, "alas, he cannot see it now," Edward began his recital.

"When I left you, my dear friends, in compliance with a father's commands, I marched with my regiment for the Canadas. Our troops were generally successful in their operations: I alone seemed doomed to feel the pangs of disappointment and sorrow. An enterprize in which I was engaged, required dispatch and caution; when in a moment of general attack, my dearest friend and earliest companion of my happy days, fell covered with wounds. Disobeying the strict orders of our commander, not to quit our posts, I bore him in my arms from the scene of horror: for this I was broke, and discharged with ignominy." Ellen wept; her heart was too full for utterance; the poor old woman sobbed aloud. "I returned," said Edward, "by the first conveyance that occurred, and returned but to see my father breathe his last. Even he too conspired against my happiness: for, would you believe it, Ellen? he has disinherited me." "How!" exclaimed Ellen, "is it in nature to be so wicked! A child he once loved so dearly!" "True," replied Edward; "but you now behold me in sickness and sorrow, without a friend to comfort, or a house to shelter me." "Never, never, my dear young master," cried Dorothy, "while the sticks of this poor cot hang together"—Ellen clasped his hand closer between hers, but spoke not. On a sudden some recollection darted across her mind; she let his hand fall and sighed deeply. "What ails my Ellen?" asked Edward; "will she not confirm the words of her mother?" "Ah, me!" said Ellen, "I am thinking how happy Miss Lyndall will be to have the power of restoring you to wealth and comfort.—She can do all that our wishes dictate." "But if my Ellen gives me her love," replied Edward, "I will not seek the favour of Miss Lyndall." "And will you stay with us?" asked the enraptured Ellen. "Oh, we shall be happy enough in that case; and our debt of gratitude be in part discharged: for to you, Edward, we owe all. Your instructive care first raised my mind from ignorance; and if a virtuous sentiment animates this breast, from you it derives its source." "You are unjust to yourself, Ellen: instructions, if bestowed where there is not innate virtue, is like the vain attempt at cultivating a rocky soil. But how, my love, can you think of supporting an idle intruder? Your means are but scant, though your heart is ample." "We will work the harder," said Dorothy: "We knit and spin and have a thousand ways of getting a penny; and when you get strong and healthy, you shall work."—"Edward work!" exclaimed the indignant Ellen. "And why not, my child?" rejoined Dorothy. "Is there any disgrace in honest industry? Edward is not proud; and when with some juice of simples, which you Ellen, shall gather, we have bathed his eyes, who knows but, by the favour of Heaven, his sight may be restored? Thus, Ellen, he will assist our labours, see our cheerful endeavours to make him forget all past misfortunes; and we shall be the happiest family in the village." "Excellent creature!" cried Edward, "my whole life shall pass in active gratitude. But I must away: on the brow of the hill I left a weary traveller; I will bring him to taste a cup of your beer, and speed him on his journey." Ellen was unwilling that he should leave her so soon, though but for a few minutes; but when Edward continued absent above two hours, her terror was inexpressible! The night closed in, and Edward did not return. Ellen's couch was covered with tears, and morning found her pale and sad. She waited at the door in anxious expectation, and with a scream of wild joy exclaimed, "he is coming!" He was supported by an elderly man; and Ellen hasted forward to lend her assistance also, while Dorothy prepared their homely breakfast. Edward seemed breathless with fatigue; and the stranger accounted for the delay, by saying that he had wandered up the country, fearing his companion had forgotten him. "Ah! you are cold and wet!" said Ellen. "No, my love; you see I have a great coat. I found my little parcel at the house where I rested last night." "And that house, which was once your own cruel father's, should now be yours," said Ellen. "But, no; he was not cruel, Edward; for he has given you to us." "Come, come; this is fine talking," cried Dorothy, "while the poor youth is cold and hungry; and see the tears how they roll down his cheeks." "Do your eyes pain you Edward?" enquired Ellen: "let me wash them with spring water." "They do, indeed," said he. In the gentlest manner possible, Ellen removed the bandage; and his full, expressive, hazle eye met her's, beaming joy and love. She receded with a scream of surprize. He threw off his coat, and discovered his dress decorated with every military honour. "Ellen forgive this deception; it was my father's stratagem; and here he is a witness to your disinterested affection. I am not dishonoured, but promoted, by my noble commander to high military rank." "It is true, indeed," said the old gentleman, "I suspected my son of an unworthy choice, and dictated this stratagem as the means of confirmation. Miss Lyndall disdained a poor infirm soldier, and now my Edward has to sue you for your acceptance." Dumb gratitude seized the trembling Ellen: she fell at the feet of Dr. Hamilton, bathed his hands with her tears, and vainly tried to express the feelings of her oppressed heart. The rustic meal passed some time unregarded, till composure was restored, and the benevolence of the intention rendered it a repast palateable even to Dr. Hamilton.—"Your rose-tree is withered," said Ellen. "Indeed I could not preserve it." "Heed it not," returned Edward: "it was a hot-house plant, and could ill endure the slightest breeze of mischance. You, Ellen, are the blooming Wild Rose of the Valley, whose native sweetness is but increased by the homeliness of the culture it received.

"Oh, let me then transplant thee into a richer soil,
"And of my garden be the pride and joy."

Ellen, with blushing joy, gave her hand to her lover, who that day led her to the mansion house, where the delighted inhabitants of the village came to make their heart-felt gratulations; and, in the happiness of his children, Dr. Hamilton found his cure; and the aged Dorothy sunk into a peaceful grave, beloved and revered by her dutiful child; and to the arms of Dr. Hamilton, is now added with proud triumph, the blooming Wild Rose of the Valley.

Bank of the United States.

In a late judicial decision it appears to be the opinion of Judge Washington, that the Bank of the United States, in certain cases, has no right to refuse the payment of notes cut in two, though both parts should not be produced. "Cutting a bank note into two parts (says the Judge,) does not discharge the Bank from the debt of which the note was but the evidence; nor does it even impair the evidence itself, if, by uniting the parts, the contents of the entire note can be made out. If one of the parts should be lost, or destroyed, the debt would be no more affected, than if the entire note had been lost or destroyed. The evidence is impaired indeed, not by the act of cutting the note, but by the same accident which would have affected the entire note had that been lost. In both cases the owner must resort to secondary evidence, and is bound to prove that the note did once exist, that it is lost or destroyed, and that he is the true and bonafide owner of the debt. If one part only of the note be lost, the difficulty which the real owner of it has to encounter, in proving his right to the debt, is diminished."

The Secretary of the Treasury reports to the House of Representatives, in answer to Mr. Darlington's call for information, that no money arising from militia fines, in the state of Pennsylvania, has been paid into the Treasury of the United States. Connecting this fact with the information derived from common report, that something like two hundred thousand dollars were to be collected in this way, it is one of no little interest. Mr. Smith, the late Marshal, it appears, never paid any money over on this account to Mr. Conard, the present Marshal, nor gave him any definite information on the subject. It further appears that the Deputies of the late Marshal had generally refused to pay over to the present Marshal the balance in their hands, and it also appears, from papers delivered over by Mr. Smith, and from information derived from other sources, that Lewis Deffebach, one of Mr. Smith's Deputies in Bucks county, had a balance in his hands of $3,546 60, and that similar abuses had been committed by other Deputies of Mr. Smith, but to what extent cannot be definitely ascertained. Here is an "Augean stable" indeed!

CONGRESS.

Amongst the petitions presented on Monday, in the Senate, was one by Mr. Lowrie, from the Pennsylvania Society for the Abolition of Slavery, praying further measures to suppress the African Slave Trade, and to promote the extermination of slavery in the country—after some discussion it was referred to the committee on the Judiciary.

Mr. Benton, after some remarks explanatory of the object, and to show the necessity of the enquiry which he rose to propose, submitted the following resolution:

Resolved, That the committee on Public Lands be instructed to inquire into the expediency of making further provision by law for the final adjustment of private land claims in the state of Missouri.

The resolution heretofore submitted by Mr. Barbour, proposing to amend the Constitution so as to fix the number of which the House of Representatives shall consist, being the order of the day, Mr. B. said, that as the subject was now before the other house, it was of no use to press the question on this resolution to an early decision, as the amendment could not operate for some time: he therefore moved its postponement to the third Monday in February—which was agreed to.

On Tuesday, agreeably to notice, Mr. Lowrie asked leave to introduce a bill to vest in the respective states the right of the United States to all fines assessed for the non-performance of militia duty during the last war. In Pennsylvania, the collection of these fines has long been a subject of much interest. The courts martial were constituted under the authority of an act of the legislature.—Objections were made to their jurisdiction, and not until the Supreme Court of the United States passed upon the subject was the question finally settled. The case sent up for adjudication was the following: Moore, the Deputy Marshal of Lancaster county, Penn. collected a fine from Houston, a delinquent militiaman, who, after the fine was collected, brought suit against Mr. Moore, in the court of common pleas. His objection was, that part of the state law was unconstitutional. The court sustained the objection, and judgment was rendered against the deputy marshal. A writ of error was immediately taken to the Supreme Court of the state. This decision of the Court of Common Pleas raised a very considerable excitement in the public mind. Of what use, it was asked, are our laws—of what use is patriotism, if those who disobey the law are protected, and those who left their homes, for the defence of their country, are to be subjected to fines and penalties, and stigmatized as trespassers? The legislature, then in session, participated largely in these feelings. Petitions were presented, from the deputy marshals and the members of the courts martial, praying the interference and protection of the representatives of the people. The field officers of an entire brigade informed the governor that, if this decision was sustained, they could not longer hold their commissions. There was, however, no direct manner by which the legislature could act upon the subject. They passed an act directing the Supreme Court to meet immediately, and decide upon the writ of error, and that counsel should be employed to aid the deputy marshal. The Supreme Court met accordingly, and reversed the decision of the court below. A writ of error was then taken to the Supreme Court of the United States. Mr. L. here went into an examination of the opinion of the Supreme Court; and read several extracts, from the case, as reported in 5th Wheaton's reports, affirming the decision of the Supreme Court of Pennsylvania. These, said Mr. Lowrie, are some of the most important facts and principles connected with the bill I now offer to the consideration of the Senate. I am aware that this is not the proper stage of the bill to offer any arguments in favour of its passage. My wish would be, however, to leave a favourable impression on the mind of the Senate. Pennsylvania is deeply interested in this measure. During the last war she furnished all the men required of her—she furnished more. The number called for was 20,387, the number furnished was 21,926, being 1539 more than the requisition. If, in addition to this, you collect from her citizens a quarter of a million of dollars, her case will be a hard one.

On Monday and Tuesday, the House of Representatives were principally occupied with the consideration of the Bankrupt Bill, and there is every prospect of obtaining a deliberate decision upon its merits. Mr. Sergeant occupied the floor nearly the whole of the two days, in favour of the bill, and treated the subject in his usual style of eloquence.

After Mr. S. had concluded, Mr. Stevenson moved to strike out the first section, in order to try the sense of the House on the principle of the bill—and Mr. Sergeant having assented to this course, the committee were about to rise, when

Mr. Woodson addressed the chair—the able and eloquent appeal by the gentleman from Pennsylvania, (he said,) in behalf of the mercantile class of the community, is most honorable to the feelings of his own heart, and they are such as will be responded to by those of the nation. It is only to be lamented that they are not sufficiently comprehensive; that they do not attach themselves to that description of persons justly and emphatically termed the bone and sinew of a government. My allusion to the agricultural portion of the community cannot be mistaken. Ought our sympathy to be silent or unheard when it cries for their relief? Are we called upon to legislate exclusively for the mercantile interest? Would this be just? Can it be within the spirit or letter of our powers on this subject? I believe not. The authority to establish an uniform system of Bankruptcy excludes the idea. It could not be intended to confine its necessary and salutary provisions to a priviledged few. Mr. W. submitted the following amendment:

"That all classes of the community, other than the descriptions of persons before mentioned, shall have the privilege, at their election, of becoming voluntary bankrupts, with the consent and approbation of a major part in value of all the creditors of such voluntary bankrupt, previously obtained and duly certified. And that such bankrupt shall be subjected to the same proceedings, and liable to the same penalties, fines, and forfeitures, and be entitled to all the privileges, benefits, and advantages, as are provided for, and made applicable to all other bankrupts, by the regulations of this bill."

The House, on Wednesday, after the usual business was gone through, on motion of Mr. Sergeant, again took up the Bankrupt Bill, in committee of the whole.

The amendment proposed by Mr. Woodson, of Kentucky, was withdrawn by the mover.

Mr. Stevenson, of Virginia, then addressed the chair in favor of his motion for striking out the first section of the bill, (in other words to defeat it.) He proceeded to state his views at large on the inexpediency of the bill.

When Mr. S. had concluded, the committee rose, and the house adjourned.

On the same day, in the Senate, Mr. Johnson, of Louisiana, submitted the following for consideration:

Resolved, That the committee on naval affairs be instructed to enquire into the expediency of providing by law, for the building of an additional number of vessels of war for the protection of the commerce of the United States, in the Gulph of Mexico; and into the propriety of employing one or more of the frigates or ships of war of the U. States, for the same purpose.

The Senate were engaged in this day's sitting chiefly on executive business.

Among the petitions presented some days ago, in the lower house, was one by Mr. Rhea, from the Seventh Convention of the Manumission Society of Tennessee, praying that provision may be made whereby all slaves, which may hereafter be born within the District of Columbia, shall be free at a certain period of their lives, and that Congress will give every facility in their power to effect a final abolition of the system of African slavery within the United States—which was referred to the committee on the Judiciary.

Miscellaneous.

LATE FROM CANTON.

The ship Adonis, Captain Brumley, has arrived at New-York from Canton, after the remarkably short passage of 106 days. The Adonis has been absent less than ten months, and had not been heard of since her departure. Capt. B. has furnished the following intelligence:—

About the latter part of September, a seaman belonging to the ship Emily, Copeland, of Baltimore, was accused of having killed a Chinese woman. The Mandarins immediately demanded the man, in order to punish him for the alledged murder, but Capt. Copeland, not being satisfied respecting his guilt, declined giving him up. After considerable negociations between Mr. Wilcocks, our consul, joined by the American residents, captains, and supercargoes, and the Chinese authorities, during which the Americans evinced a determination not to give up the seaman without having his guilt proved, and many threats were thrown out on the other side of stopping the trade, and other coercive measures—it was at last agreed that the man should be tried for the offence on board the Emily; it was also agreed that the evidence of the white men should be admitted as well as the Chinese.—These concessions, on the part of the Chinese, when compared with their former conduct on similar occasions, wherein the English were concerned, was considered at Canton as a proof of their favourable sentiments towards the Americans. However, if the man should be found guilty, and then not be given up to be punished according to their laws, an immediate stoppage of all trade and intercourse, will no doubt take place.

Savannah, (Geo.) Jan. 11.

Prince Champlin, a free man of colour, was on Tuesday brought before Justices Epsiger, Russel and Barton, on a charge of inveigling or enticing away two women of colour, belonging to an individual in this city.—This case comes within the provisions of the act of Assembly of 1816—previous to which it was deemed a capital offence, and a person was executed not many years since for the same crime. The prisoner was cook on board the ship Diana, which sailed from this port a short time since, for New-York. Information having been given to the owner of the slaves, that they were concealed for the purpose mentioned in the charge, search was made for them, and with the assistance of the captain they were discovered, and with the prisoner secured. The women were secreted under the larboard wing behind a canvass screen put up to conceal them, where they were supplied with food by the cook, and with water from a barrel in the steerage. The facts were fully proved, and the prisoner sentenced to one year's imprisonment in the penitentiary at hard labour, for each offence, and at the expiration of that period to be sold as a slave for life.

A report was circulated at Natchitoches that Gen. Long, and 30 or 40 of his companions, went recently to Labadie, where they represented themselves as a party who had come to settle under Austin's grant and were well received by the Spaniards; but after a few days they took forcible possession of the town, and levied heavy contributions on the inhabitants. It was added that their triumph was short. Some troops arrived from St. Antonio, made the marauders prisoners, and marched them in chains to the interior.

From Port au Prince.—Capt. Swain, arrived at Charleston from Cape Haytien, reports, that President Boyer was collecting his forces, with a view of attacking the Spanish part of the Island. It was supposed that all would be in readiness for the purpose by the middle of February. A piratical schr. of about 60 tons, was cruising in Caicos Passage, and had boarded several vessels bound to the Cape, which she robbed of water, provisions, &c.—one of them, the Favorite, Captain Wood.

From Pernambuco.—The brig Factor, arrived in Hampton Roads from Pernambuco, brings an account that on the 7th Nov. a fleet of transports, under convoy of a frigate carrying all the European troops, consisting of the 2d battalion of Albaroes, sailed for Lisbon. The European residents, both before and after the embarkation of the troops, felt considerably alarmed, but at the time of the Factor's sailing, their fears were subsiding.

The cause of French, vs. Hawley, &c. at the late Supreme Court, for the county of Fairfield, state of Connecticut, was an action of trespass for breaking into the house and conveying away the goods of the plaintiff. The Plaintiff proved that one of the defendants, entered the house by the chimney, and then broke open the windows and doors. The defendants justified themselves under a writ of attachment, and contended that the descending into the house by the chimney was lawful for the service of civil process; and if not, being once in the house though by an unlawful entrance, yet the taking of the goods was not a trespass, for which damage might be recovered. But it was decided that an entrance by the chimney to serve civil process was unlawful, and that all service done in consequence of such unlawful entry, was void.

The British brig Charlotte Ann, Friak, has arrived at Eastport, from Jamaica and Havana. Whilst laying in the latter port, she was boarded by a gang of desperadoes, from the shore, for the purpose of plunder—they had long knives, and threatened the crew with instant death, if they resisted.—Capt. F. hearing the noise on deck, jumped out of the cabin window, swam to the British sloop of war Ontario, which immediately dispatched a boat to his assistance, when the ruffians fled, without accomplishing their designs.

On Saturday last, James Rose, was committed to the City Prison, New York, on a warrant of Judge Livingston. He was brought in by the U. States schr. Shark, and charged with the crime of piracy. That being a citizen of the U. States, he was one of the crew of the French schr. Caroline, which was engaged in the slave trade, and assisted in receiving on board that vessel, 153 negroes, with intent to make them slaves. This crime by the act of the 15th May, 1820, is punishable with death.

From the Spanish Main.—Capt. Lord of the brig Leonidas, arrived at Savannah from Aux Cayes, informs that the last advices from Puerto Cabello, stated that place to be still in possession of the Royalists, though it was daily expected that it would fall, and it was said the Royal troops had expressed a willingness to surrender, upon being sent to Porto Rico. Cartlingena continued perfectly tranquil, and the inhabitants who had left it upon its being taken possession of by the Patriots were returning.

As three men were descending the Alabama River, near Montgomery, on a raft, it struck against a tree and sunk. The men succeeded in climbing the tree, and after remaining till the next day, almost perished with cold, two of them attempted to swim ashore; one was drowned, and the other reached the shore, but was found the next morning frozen to death. The other man after remaining in the tree 32 hours, was relieved by a canoe.

THE MILLENIUM.—The legislature of Maryland has again rejected the Jew bill, while we perceive by an advertisement in a Charleston paper, that a Jew is authorised and employed, and actually engaged in collecting and receipting for monies for the erection in that city, of a Roman Catholic Cathedral Church.

MR. WUATS, on the 10th inst. says the Pottstown Times, presented a petition 37 feet long, filled with signatures from top to bottom, two deep, for the repeal of the law laying a tax on storekeepers.

We have been informed that the Winnebagoe Indians had determined to make an attack on Fort Armstrong, having been informed by two of their tribe who had made their escape from the jail in Kaskaskia, of the death of two of their nation, one of whom was executed at that place. We are certain, however, that the commanding officer at Fort Armstrong is on the alert; and perhaps the above is only a threat, as we are well assured that should they make an attack on that Fort they could not succeed. New Invention.—It may well be said, says a correspondent, that ours is truly an age of invention. A new Gig, belonging to Henry McColm, Esq. of Somerset, was exhibited in this city a few days since, to which was attached a machine of his own invention which strikes at the end of every mile, and at the same time shews the distance, and is constructed on such precise mathematical principles that it may be set so as to tell the distance of nine thousand miles, and may be taken off or added to any wheel carriage without the least inconvenience.

The Evening Post.

PHILADELPHIA.

Saturday, January 26, 1822.

No event has transpired in this city, within our recollection, calculated to excite more general sympathy than the destruction of the Orphan Asylum, and its attending deplorable calamity. What mind can dwell on the awful catastrophe, and not shudder—the heart sickens at the bare recital. In the dead hour of night—a freezing night it was—upwards of one hundred orphan children lay slumbering in this hospitable mansion, the pride of the munificent ladies of Philadelphia—when suddenly the devouring element burst forth, and enveloped the whole in flames!—Here we might pause, for our feeble efforts cannot depicture the scene which ensued. Every parent will commisserate the condition of the little inmates of this charitable institution—and the untimely fate of twenty-three innocent victims, who were consumed before the assistance which was offered could reach them, will long be remembered.—Not a vestige of the beautiful edifice, which was the Orphan Asylum, remains but cracked and tottering walls—all that was under the roof, of a combustible nature, has been utterly destroyed." The fire commenced about half past two on Wednesday night—it originated from some clothes which had been placed by the fire to dry. A meeting of the citizens took place yesterday, and measures have been concerted to relieve the sufferers. Three thousand dollars were immediately subscribed, and committees appointed to collect donations in the different wards.—Among a number of instances of feeling on this occasion, we record two which is particularly worthy of notice—in one of our schools the scholars forwarded by their teacher, $180 for the use of the Asylum, and at a school of young ladies about $30 were collected. One of the Masonic lodges have voted $100—in fact, the bounty of our citizens never shone more conspicuous than in this instance, and the Orphan's heart will have abundant cause to weep for joy. The proceeds of Monday evening, at the Walnut street, will be appropriated to the use of the Asylum.

Owing to the late repeated night robberies, the Mayor has suspended the duty of the Watch, of calling the hour. We hope this salutary measure will have its desired effect.

MILITIA FINES.

It appears by a statement laid before Congress, that John Smith, late Marshal of this state, by his own account, paid into the Treasury of the United States, $2,742 42 more than he has received for militia fines during the last war. John Conard, the present marshal, says he has collected $3,671 50 cents, and paid in expense of collecting the same, $3,590 56.

U. S. SHIP WASP.

The survivors, heirs, and legal representatives of the officers and crew of the late ship Wasp, capt. Blakeley, are notified in the National Intelligencer, that their claims will be settled on application to the Secretary of the Navy, transmitting a certificate, signed by a Judge of some Court of Record, in the state or territory where they reside, authenticating their right to the same.

The papers from the north and south have been extremely barren for this week past. This, no doubt, is produced by the interference of Jack Frost, who spares neither age, sex, nor condition—it is more than likely, if he troubles our neighbours as much as he does us, his welcome must be quite worn out. When a thaw once takes place the columns of the public prints may be inundated by the sweeping mass of intelligible matter which now remains congealed in the atmosphere.

A few nights ago, the attention of some gentlemen who had met on business in the Washington Hall, was arrested by the crash of a pane of glass in one of the upper windows. A dog who accompanied them up stairs, picked up a ball, which on examination was found to be composed of combustible matter, which had been set on fire, but had been quenched by some accident, too soon to answer the purposes of the incendiary. It was thrown into the Hall, from Lingham's Court.

Daring Outrage—Early on Thursday evening week, as Mr. James Ross, a respectable young mechanic of Southwark, was returning home from visiting some friends, residing in the outskirts of the city, he was suddenly assaulted by two men, who rushed out upon him and struck a violent blow on the top of his head, which stunned him immediately. He was afterwards found lying at the door of a house in South-street, near Second, against which he had fallen, having wandered a considerable distance in an almost insensible state. The villains robbed him of a new coat, hat and cravat, and are supposed to have beaten him severely after their first attack, as one of his eyes was nearly cut through, and an ear lacerated in a dreadful manner, besides several severe wounds in his face. Mr. Ross has been lying in a state of partial derangement ever since this outrage, which is supposed to have been perpetrated in the vicinity of Washington Square, at about 8 o'clock in the evening.

To rescue poor debtors from the sharks of the profession, who are always ready to offer their services, and to fleece their clients of the scanty substance which misfortune has left them, ninety-nine members of the New-York Bar, have signed a paper, in which they promise that each of them will give advice gratis, to effect the liberation of one poor debtor from jail, if application is made within twelve month from the 24th of January.

STATE LEGISLATURE.

The bill to repeal the act laying a duty on the retailers of foreign merchandize is in full debate in the House of Representatives, since Tuesday. It is not like to be done with soon, if we judge from the length of the speeches already delivered, and the note of preparation that appears among a number of members, who have not yet spoken, to explain their views of the subject. We do not think the repealing bill will pass, although the vote upon it promises to be a very close one.

The bill for extending the charter of the Philadelphia bank, after being under discussion several days in the Senate, was postponed indefinitely on Tuesday.

The resolution for an apportionment of the public lands, among the states which have not received them, for the purposes of education, passed the Senate, in the early part of the session, by an unanimous vote, but meets with opposition in the House of Representatives. It has been postponed three times and is now the order for Wednesday. The fate of the project is doubtful, when its opponents are able to postpone it thus often.

A bill to establish a Loan Office was reported in the House of Representatives, on Tuesday last. [Harrisburg Chronicle.

PUNCTUAL ATTENDANCE IN CONGRESS.

The Senate, composed of forty-eight members, representing twenty-four states, are all, with the exception of C. A. Rodney, from Delaware, (who has not yet taken his seat,) in attendance on their legislative functions.

The House of Representatives, consisting of 187 members and two delegates, representing twenty-four states and two territories, are all, with the exception of three absentees, viz: Gideon Tomlinson, of Connecticut, (on leave;) Louis M'Clane, of Delaware (indisposed;) and Henry H. Ryan of Tennessee, his seat not taken this Congress) in the daily transaction of their legislative duties.

There are, at present, two vacancies in this body, viz: one in the New-York delegation, occasioned by the resignation of Solomon Van Rensellaer; and another in Delaware, by the recent election of C. A. Rodney to the Senate. [Wash. Gaz.

DRAMATIC SUMMARY.

WALNUT STREET THEATRE. The historical and patriotic Melo-Drama, called YUSUF CARAMELLI, or the siege of Tripoli, was represented yester evening. This play is from the prolific pen of Mr. NOAH, of New-York. That gentleman was for several years a Consul at one of the Barbary ports, whence however he was recalled by this government on the score of his religion. Being of a keen penetrating mind, and a close observer of men and things—it is not wonderful that he should have produced a just delineation of the manners and habits of the Tripolitans, and of their fluctuating demeanour towards his countrymen.—We are pleased that Mr. NOAH's last drama of MARION is announced to be in a state of forward preparation at the same theatre.

On Monday evening, at the Walnut street Theatre, for the benefit of the Orphan Asylum, The Voice of Nature—the farce of The Rendezvous—and the Forty Thieves, are announced for representation.

At the Prune street Theatre, this evening, the performances are, The Stranger, and the Broken Sword. Mr. Porter's benefit on Monday night.

At New-York, Mr. Phillips's personated Cassim Baba, last evening, in the Forty Thieves—after which was added, The Spoil'd Child, and Valentine and Orson.

At the Boston Theatre, Mons. Labasse appeared for the third time, in the grand spectacle of La Belle Peruvienne, on Monday evening last.

At the Amphitheatre, Master Carnes had a benefit on the same evening.

Mr. Pelby was at Baltimore, the beginning of this week, giving Readings and Recitations.

At Harrisburg, on Thursday evening, was represented The Point of Honour, and the farce of the Village Lawyer—between the pieces Mrs. Allen introduced a favorite song. The Maid and the Magpie, with other entertainments, were announced for this evening.

Mr. Cooper is on a tour to the southward.

WIT.—The learned Dr. Mitchell, a few days since, at a large dinner party, was asked what he would be helped to. After a considerable pause, he replied, with great gravity, "Why is Dr. M. like the Emperor Alexander?" This singular reply for a moment put the whole board in a state of suspense, when the Doctor proceeded—"Because he wants a slice of TURKEY," at the same time putting his fork in a large one before him, and taking a wing.—Statesman.

WEEKLY SUMMARY.

Last week, as the convicts from the penitentiary at New-York, were clearing out the Canal, they found the crucifix, lustre, goblet, and bottom of a candlestick, that were stolen from the Catholic Cathedral, about 12 months since.

Thompson, who murdered Miss Hamilton some time since, died on Sunday morning last, in the Baltimore county goal. Verdict of the jury, that he came to his death from the visitation of God.

MUTINY.—Four seamen concerned in the mutiny on board the ship Kate, of London, Capt. Purdie, have been hung at Barbadoes. On the trial, Kidd, the greatest villain of the set, was admitted as king's evidence. The facts relating to this case were these—they took forcible possession of the ship, and having bound the captain, put him, his wife, their two children, a servant, and a passenger, into a small gig boat, with only ten biscuits and two oars. These unhappy victims have not been heard of, and there is little doubt that they have perished.

LOSS OF THE BARQUE PACKET.

The following particulars of the loss of the barque Packet, Capt. Foote, of New-York, and the melancholy fate of the crew, was furnished by Mr. George Ramsay, the only survivor, in a letter to the owners:

"We left Cadiz on the 9th of August, arrived at St. Thomas on the 6th September, and were cast away on the 13th of Sept. We made the land at half past 7, A. M. which we judged to be Key Romano—stood off all day—and reefed the topsails—then sent down top gallant yards and struck top gallant mast. At 5, close reefed the foresail—in the course of 10 minutes after, the ship was water logged—took in the foresail and mizen staysail—after which, she was water logged again. The gale still increased. At 8, the watch was called, and we went down into the cabin, as the forehatch was down on account of the heavy sea. We remained about ten minutes, when the captain called all hands, the ship being water logged again. We were employed in attempting to knock off the lee bulwarks, to get the water off deck—but in vain, owing to the vessel going over by the force of the wind and sea. I sung out to all hands near me to come to windward, when we lashed ourselves to the chain plates, and remained an hour and a half before the vessel righted. The captain and three seamen succeeded in getting on board. Mr. Shannon, the mate, was drowned in the attempt—also William Jackson, William Cannes, Henry Taylor, and Thomas Johnson, seamen. The cook, and a passenger, name unknown, were drowned in the cabin. The captain, myself, the steward, and one seaman remained on the wreck five days, lashed to the taffrail, the sea beating over us. When the gale abated, we saw the land—and the water being smooth, we constructed a raft, and sent John Patterson and the steward to make the land (which was about 20 miles off) and procure a boat for our assistance. Capt. Foote and myself remained on the wreck till next morning, waiting in vain for assistance—We made a raft and embarked, but lost sight of the point where the first raft landed. We expected it was the main land, but were disappointed and could find no assistance, and were suffering very much for want of water, which we had not tasted for several days. We reached the shore next day about 10 o'clock, and remained by the raft 4 days. On the 19th we left the raft and walked from Key to Key to find the Main. It was seventeen days before we could get any water, and then the captain was almost gone. Next morning we walked on a little while, when he said he could not live much longer, and soon after died. I pursued my way alone, sometimes up to my neck in water, when at last I had the pleasure of seeing a boat, which I hailed, when they came to my assistance. I was taken on board without a stitch of clothing on—and was carried to a place called Gournaha. I here found a Philadelphia sloop, and in coming out of port, was stopped by a Spanish privateer and carried to Havana. I have now arrived at Baltimore."

The Saturday Mails.

Some have calculated one in every 2000, which would make the number in this state amount to more than 500.

POLICE.

Speedy Justice.—A theft was committed about four days ago in the village of Poughkeepsie, of three watches and a fine coat. The thief made for New-York, and arrived here the night before last. A messenger with a warrant issued against the culprit, by a magistrate in Poughkeepsie, called at our police office yesterday morning for aid; and in a few hours the fellow was in Bridewell and the property restored. He was a young man, and sustained a reputation above suspicion or reproach.

The house of Dr. Arden, in Walker street was entered on Wednesday evening last, between the hours of 7 and 9 o'clock, and $200 dollars stolen from a private desk. A mulatto girl who had lately been a servant in the family, was suspected and taken up, and on her examination at the Police yesterday morning confessed the fact, and gave up five dollars of the money; but the rest, she said, she had lost. The house of another yellow woman with whom she lived was searched, nothing however was discovered.

In the course of the day, word was sent to Conklin, the marshall, by a man who had been reconnoitring her, that she was dashing about the city in a coach; shopping at all the fashionable stores, and making expensive purchases of shawls, bonnets, hats, ribbons, &c. in the tip of the mode. She was immediately taken up, with the goods she had purchased upon her. On her examination she evinced all the impudence, and adroitness of experienced guilt; and stood out for her innocence to the last, though it was proved, that the mulatto girl who had just before confessed she stole the money, boarded with her; and although she actually had Mrs. A's indispensable with her, and $50 of the money in it. It hardly need be added that both the women are safe in Bridewell, and the Leghorn hats and shawls, and the money unexpended, given over to Dr. A. [N. Y. Com. Adv.

BALM OF COLUMBIA,

An important recent Chemical discovery.

THE ladies and gentlemen of this city and elsewhere, are respectfully informed, that John Oldridge has fortunately discovered, by the power of chemistry, the grand desideratum of preventing Hair from falling off in FORTY-EIGHT HOURS. This balm will most absolutely, in the course of a short time, make the Hair grow healthy and thick. J. O. is well aware that many fraudulent and impositious Oils, &c have been imposed on the public, and therefore prejudice will be severe against his discovery, until trial shall convince his patrons that such a thing exists in nature as a certain preventative against the loss of hair. This valuable balm will cause whiskers and beards to grow rapidly. No danger need be apprehended to the human system by the application of this capillary restorative. The public may rest assured that it helps nature, and is perfectly harmless.

Prepared and sold, at $1 a pint, or 50 cents for a half pint bottle, by JOHN OLDRIDGE, No. 55½ South Front street, Philadelphia.

RECOMMENDATION.

WE, the undersigned, do hereby certify, that we have, in various cases, used the Balm of Columbia, lately discovered by John Oldridge, of Philadelphia, and have found it highly serviceable not only as a preventative against the falling off of hair, but also as a restorative. We, therefore, feel assured of its excellence, and consider it valuable and well worthy the attention of the public. In testimony whereof, we have added our respective signatures, and given it our warmest recommendation.

THE OLIO.

"Variety's the very spice of life,
That gives it all its flavour."

EPITAPH ON A GLUTTON.

Could thy teeth speak they'd thank thee o'er and o'er,
They know a rest they never knew before.

A lady being in company with a large party, the conversation turned upon the time at which a female is forbid to tell her age, she applied to a gentleman who had sat without speaking for some time, with a, "Pray Mr. Justice Silence when I am asked what is my age, what answer shall I give?"—"Say, madam," replied he, "what I believe will be the truth,—that you are not yet come to years of discretion."

Mr. Garrow, examining a witness, asked him what his business was: he answered, "A dealer in old iron."—"Then said the Counsel, "you must of course be a thief."—"I don't see," replied the witness, "why a dealer in iron must necessarily be a thief, more than a dealer in brass."

A barrister, in the Court of King's Bench, describing the bad usage of a high-bred horse, said that the animal had for for some time been employed in dragging heavy loads, and fed on coarse old hay till the animal himself had demurred to the treatment;" "he should not have demurred (replied Mr. Erskine,) now the winter season is over; he had better have put himself on the country."

"What will you leave me in your will?" asked the lady of an Irishman, "The wide world!" he replied.

An honest tar hired a horse to carry him a few miles, but before he had got many yards, he found he possessed the usual excellencies of the fourfooted hirelings of the roads, such as blindness, lameness, stumbling, &c. The sailor, however, (having been unshipped twice with very little ceremony in the length of half a mile, by the creature falling on its knees) hit upon a very whimsical mode of curing the impediment, which was by tying a large stone to his tail, and in that state rode several miles, swearing, "shiver his timbers, but it was the only thing to prevent the ship's going too much ahead."

In the early part of the reign of George II. the footman of a lady of quality, under the absurd infatuation of a dream, disposed of the savings of the last twenty years of his life in two lottery tickets, which proved blanks, after a few days he put an end to his life. In his box was found the following plan of the manner in which he would spend the 5000*l.* prize, which his mistress preserved as a curiosity:—"As soon as I have received the money, I will marry Grace Towers, but as she has been cross and coy, I will use her as a servant. Every morning she shall get me a mug of strong beer, with a toast, nutmeg, and sugar in it; then I will sleep till ten, after which I will have a sack posset. My dinner shall be on table by one, and never without a good pudding; I will have a stock of wine and brandy laid in. About five in the afternoon I will have tarts and jellies, and a gallon bowl of punch; at ten a hot supper of two dishes. If I am in a good humour, and Grace behaves herself, she shall sit down with me. To bed about twelve."

A Modern Amazon.

A robbery of a novel cast recently took place in the county of Emanuel, state of Georgia. A certain physician, who is infirm and old, had been attending on the daughter of a Mr. and Mrs. Gregory. After the recovery of the patient, the father paid the Doctor for his professional services, the sum of forty-five dollars, which, with other collections he had made about the same time, amounted to 70 or $80. While on his way home, and passing by a swamp, this infirm and aged son of Esculapius was accosted by a foe clad in no ordinary terror. It was no less than Mrs. Gregory, the mother of his late patient, as the Doctor has since declared, under the solemnity of an oath before a civil tribunal, habited in the attire of a warrior, her face well blacked, a musket upon her shoulder, and two or three pieces of pipe stems thrust out of her mouth. She advanced with the intrepidity of Joan of Arc, seized his bridle rein with one hand, and with the other laid hold of the pocket which contained the money, and never relaxed her grasp till she tore away the pocket and secured its contents. Mrs. G. is now in the county goal waiting the return of the Superior Court for her trial. A disgraceful transaction took place in an attempt to bail her out a short time after her apprehension. The justices of the Inferior Court refused to accept of the securities which were offered for her appearance at court, when Gregory and an unprincipled band attached to his interest, seized one of the judges as he was about to return home, dragged him from his horse, dislocated his hip, and left him half dead upon the ground. This gentleman, has ever since been confined to bed at the court house, unable to return to his family.

BROOKES'S

General Gazetteer Improved.

BENNETT & WALTON, No. 37 Market street, Philadelphia, propose to publish by subscription, BROOKES'S GENERAL GAZETTEER IMPROVED; or a new and compendious Geographical Dictionary, containing a description of the Empires, Kingdoms, States, Provinces, Cities, Towns, Forts, Seas, Harbours, Rivers, Lakes, Mountains, Capes, &c. in the known World; with the Government, Customs, Manners and Religion of the Inhabitants; the Extent, Boundaries, and Natural Productions of each Country; the Trade, Manufactures, and Curiosities of the Cities and Towns; their Longitude, Latitude, Bearings and Distances in English Miles, from remarkable places; and the various events by which they have been distinguished: including the Constitution of the United States, the Ordinance of 1787, and the Constitutions of the respective States. Together with a succinct Account of at least, fifteen hundred Cities, Towns, and Villages in America, more than has appeared in any foreign Edition of the same Work; in which the numerous mistakes and deficiencies of European Gazetteers, respecting this Country, are corrected and supplied: illustrated by a neat coloured Map of the United States. Originally written by R. Brookes, M. D. The third American, from the London edition of 1819, with additions and improvements by William Darby, member of the New-York Historical Society; author of a Map and Statistical Account of Louisiana; Emigrant's Guide; and a Tour from New-York to Detroit.

In order to render this edition in a particular manner valuable to an American reader, the publishers have employed William Darby of this city as an editor, to collect and insert the names of such remarkable places on this Continent, adjacent Islands, and elsewhere, as have not hitherto found a place in any Gazetteer extant; to remodify such articles as are either erroneously or defectively stated, in the original work; and in fine, as far as practicable, to comprise all the names of places worthy of notice in the world.

So many changes have taken place in Europe in the course of the last eight or ten years, as to render necessary a careful digest of the present limits of most states in that quarter of the world.

It must be obvious that in an age of active enterprize, discoveries, improvements and changes in objects of Geographical Science, will be so rapid, and unceasing in their operations, as in a few years, to render defective or obsolete any System of Geography, however perfect it may be at the time of publication. It must also be more than apparent, that the correctness of these observations apply with particular force to America: in one section of which, a widely extended revolution is daily developing, as objects of Geographical and Historical record, names of places, very imperfectly or entirely unknown to science, previous to the occurrence of the events, which have given them a title to literary attention: and in another quarter, the energies of a free and enterprising people are effecting revolutions on the face of nature, with a celerity and an extent which has no parallel in the progress of human affairs.

The publishers deem this a propitious period to issue the intended publication. The census of the United States taken for 1820, from the various objects of statistical enquiry, embraced in its details, will give a high degree of interest to any portable work of reference in which they are included, and being now completed, enables the editors to put the Gazetteer to press without delay.

No comment can be necessary to elucidate the advantages which must be comprised in a portable volume, in which will be concentrated the proposed improvements and additions.

TERMS.

The work to be comprised in one 8vo. volume of about 900 pages, printed on good paper, and to be illustrated by a new and neat coloured map of the United States, projected and engraved for the express purpose, to contain the political subdivisions, made up to the period of publication.
